Devs revoked a♥♥♥♥♥♥♥♥load of keys, including those obtained legitimately.

The solution they offered is to, drumroll please, take a screenshot of your steam library with the revoked game in it (d'oh), then email them for unspecified "help".

If you want to support this type of behaviour on Steam then go ahead and go nuts by purchasing this mediocre game.

If on the other hand, you believe that customers should be able to expect a modicum of respect from devs then feel free to pass on what, by all accounts, is a mediocre game.

RIP Artcom FZC, we barely knew ye.. Picked this game up because it looked really interesting and it was on sale. I'd really like to be able to modify my controls (I don't want to have to start running by dodge rolling first). The upside of the one hit kill on everything is it can make the boss fights seem interesting, on the other hand, having to watch a boss tea bag me for a few seconds every time i die and then having to make my way back to the boss fight and rinse and repeat until i manage to figure out how to kill them doesn't feel satisfying.

I also find it rather annoying that there isn't always a good way of knowing if you are doing the right thing with some bosses, since it's one hit kills, you have to hope you are doing the right thing and not looking at it the entirely wrong way. In the games defense, some of the bosses are really obvious, others I'm sitting here going "okay, but how do i do that?" and still others where I'm sitting here and I think i'm on the right track but I have no way of knowing until i manage to kill the boss. At the end of the day I want to look up a guide to make sure I'm doing it right but I feel like that just kills the fun for this kind of game. on the upside, the boss fight music is good for what little i get to hear it.. Rather bad.. It doesn't work for me I have done alot of ways to fix it and I don't know if this happens to all just I waned you. Outstanding short films from the creator of District 9. The future of film content distribution - from the Director and his Studio, direct to fans - free from censorship, corporate interference, and distributor \u2665\u2665\u2665\u2665\u2665\u2665\u2665\u2665t. In addition, not only do you get the films at BlueRay quality, but you also get concept art and the 3D assets, should you want to tinker\print out models.

\u2665\u2665\u2665\u2665ing superb, and I am heartily looking forward to more experiments, and a feature length offering at some point.. Fun game, once i figured out how to change the brush size and colour (instructions somewhere would have bee nice).

I noticed some minor problems. In window mode the window changes it's size back to near fullscreen size as soon as I enter or leave a gallery. Also rotating the objects is frustrating at times since they don't turn around so easily and then they turn too much. After a little patching I believe this game will very enjoyable.

Very fun game. Layout and design is well thought out. Looking forward to final product.. A fantastic, lighthearted, open-world (ala Metroid) puzzle adventure game. No hand-holding; rather than granting you new abilities, you start with everything you need to solve every puzzle from the beginning, learning new ways of interacting with what's around you as you go. A game that's hard not to love; highly recommended.. Great production quality, audio is 24bit lossless FLAC and cover image provided is 1500x1500 resolution. 81 tracks in total, appears all of the music in the game has been included. Personally I think the best track is "Sacrifice by The Sewer Gatorz" by Satoshi Hori and Ken Usami.

My only complaint is that it would have been nice with some extended/arranged versions, because most of the songs are short. Also the FLAC version is not properly tagged with artists.. Unplayable game like those buggy games made by college students for turning in their homework.. A game lacking in depth and polish, i'll look back in a year but i am not sure it'd have changed much by then.. this games owns bones unlike a skeleton in real life this game won't overstay its welcome in yr living room, it will kick your buttocks around a bit and then you get to go "i won the video game :)"
